HELPFUL TITLES FROM THE BUREAU OF THE CENSUS

John Robson
Director, Logan Library
Rose-Hulman Institute Library
Terre Haute, IN

As oft repeated by dedicated documents librarians, a wealth of helpful and expensively obtained information is hidden with government publications.

The variety of titles published by the Bureau of the Census almost literally provides "something for everyone," in addition to affording to individuals who have struggled with census forms or granted audiences to census takers the opportunity to see some tangible results of their efforts.

The Bureau publishes an exceptionally helpful guide to its publications, products and services. Cleverly entitled Census Catalog and Guide, this publication is the logical place to start when considering Census Bureau publications.

The annual publication not only describes publications and products issued during a given year, but also provides ordering information and forms and includes a comprehensive index and sources of additional information on subjects covered by the broad range of Bureau publications.

A sampling of Bureau reference publications small libraries might find useful and cost-effective include the following:

Single most essential statistical publication of the U.S., it provides an economic and social picture of the nation.

to come and buy irregularly, as time and money allow and your library's need is felt.

Let's look now at some shorter, general interest items that you may want to consider ordering as well as some subscription items which might be worth examining. Check out the Census Catalog and Guide for more publications.

Age Search Information.

Describes the Bureau's age search service, in which the Bureau searches confidential records from Federal population censuses and releases information which will serve as evidence for individuals wishing to qualify for retirement benefits, apply for passports, prove relationships in settling estates, perform genealogical research and verify birthdates.

We the Americans series.

These four publications provide brief summaries of the findings from the 1980 Census of Population.

Individual titles are:

We the Americans.

Overall summary of findings from 1980 census with photographs, bar charts and graphs.

We the Black Americans.
We the First Americans.
Profile of American Indian, Eskimo and Aleut populations.
We the Asian and Pacific Islander Americans

Factfinder for the Nation series (Information available from the Census Bureau's Customer Services Department).
Series of 22 reports on the range of Census Bureau materials available on a given subject and their suggested uses. Titles cover a wide range of topics from reference sources to availability of Census records to Bureau programs and products.

Census and You.
Monthly newsletter which gives new statistical findings, describes new products and services and provides information about related data and services available from other Federal agencies.

QUESTIONS: Contact your nearest depository library or the Indiana State Library.

###