

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Jeffrey C. Davis is Associate Professor of English and Director of the Writing Center at Wheaton College, in Wheaton, IL. A former high school teacher, he enjoys working with students as they prepare to teach English at the secondary level. He has written several articles on Quintilian and writing, and is presently working on a book entitled Quintilian's Composing Narrative. His most recent article, "Pitching a Tent, Welcoming a Traveler, and Moving On: Toward A Nomadic View of the Writing Center," appeared in The Writing Lab Newsletter (June 2001).

Casey Gonzalez is a fourth-year student at Penn State University, University Park, majoring in education. She is interested in the application of writing and collaborative theory to writing instruction at the elementary level. Her contribution to this issue emerges from her work as a peer mentor in a basic writing classroom, under the supervision of Professor Candace Spigelman, at the Penn State Berks Campus.

Robert J. Graham is Professor and chair of the Department of Curriculum and Instruction in the Faculty of Education of Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. His research interests lie in the areas of multicultural teacher education curriculum, response to literature, narrative and aesthetic approaches to research and teaching, and rhetoric and composition studies. His most recent publications have appeared in the Journal of Adult and Adolescent Literacy, The Alberta Journal of Educational Research, The Journal of Educational Thought, and English Quarterly.

Janis Haswell is Associate Professor of English at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi, where she teaches composition and 20th century British literature. She has published Pressed Against Divinity: W.B. Yeats's Feminine Masks and Paul Scott's Philosophy of Place(s): The Fiction of Relationality, along with numerous articles in composition and literature.

Maureen Hourigan is Associate Professor of English at Kent State University, Trumbull campus. She teaches first-year composition, women's studies, Great Books and Honors courses. She is the author of Literacy as Social Exchange: Intersections of Class, Gender, and Culture and co-editor of Grading in the Post-Process Classroom: When Theory and Practice Collide and has presented several conference papers illustrated with samples of student writing.

Anne O'Meara and John Banschbach are both professors of English at Minnesota State University in Mankato, Minnesota. Anne O'Meara is the chair of the department and teaches composition, composition theory, and American literature. John Banschbach is the former Director of Teaching Assistants and teaches composition and English education.

Lulu C.H. Sun is Associate Professor of English, Director of the M.A.T. Program in English, and former Director of First-Year English at the University of Massachusetts, Dartmouth where she teaches courses in composition, English education, and Romantic literature. She has published journal articles and presented numerous conference papers on composition, English education, and narratives, including analyses of hundreds of stories written by children, adolescents, and adults

Bill Tucker is Associate Professor of English at Eastern Michigan University and director of the Eastern Michigan Writing Project. He teaches English Education and Written Communication. A former high school teacher for twenty years, his current research interests are reflective writing for pedagogy and for service learning, genre writing as a mode of learning, and composing styles. His inspirations are his wife, Kathy, his reflective model, Pippy, and her canine associates, Peaches, Wings, and Meganne.

MEMBERSHIP & SUBSCRIPTION INFORMATION

The Journal of Teaching Writing is published by the Indiana Teachers of Writing, a nonprofit organization of teachers, professors, and editors interested in the encouragement of studies in the teaching of writing. Membership in the ITW includes a journal subscription for two issues and is $20.00 per year.

Nonmember subscriptions to the Journal of Teaching Writing are $15.00 per year; institutional subscriptions are $25.00 per year. A $10.00 handling charge is added to subscriptions outside the continental United States.

Send inquiries to:

Journal of Teaching Writing
Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis
425 University Boulevard
Cavanaugh Hall Room 505
Indianapolis, Indiana 46202

<jtw@iupui.edu>
<<http://www.iupui.edu/~jtw>>
Phone: 317.274.4777
Fax: 317.274.2347